THE MILE LIMIT. One of the Cases Argued Today in the Cour

ON EXCEPTIONS FROM THE POLICE COURT-

CLAIMS THAT THE ACT IS NOT OPERATIVE-THE

In the Court of Appeals today, Chief Justice Alvey and Justices Morris and Shepard, there wes quite a large attendance, many anticipating the announcement of the decision in the case of Bush, the liquor case argued last week. However, the case of the District agt. Jas. Dempsey, charged with selling liquors to be drunk on the premises without having obtained a license, was called up, Messrs. Leon Tobriner and Juseph J. McNally for the defendant and Attorney S. T. Thomas for the District. A ONE-MILE LIMIT.

This is one of the "one mile of Soldiers Home limit" cases, and the case comes up or exceptions taken in the Police Court to the the act of '93 in its fifteenth section expressly declares that the prosecutions shall be by the attorney of the District or any of his associates. Irrespective of this the whole machinery of the act indicates that the prosecutions shall be in the name of the District. It was alle to insist that Congress after creating the Commissioners an excise board and that prosecutions for violation of the act shall be on information in the Police Court, signed by the attorney of the District or one of his assistants, to claim that Congress intended that such prosections should be in the name of the United States. Aside from this, the eightenth section of the act delares "that ingly manifested by the full attendance of the commissioners. When the session opened there the public general laws of the United States imposing taxes on the manufacture and sale of flquors for the purposes of revenue." This language shows that the act was intended to be local in its character, and avoids any possible misconstruction that the United States should prosecute for violations of it. The license set of 1878 (20 Stat., 173), requiring the keepers of dogs to pay a tax, provides that prosecutions shall be by information in the Police Court, at the instance of the United States district attorney. It was held by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia that a prosecution under that statute was properly instituted in the name of the United States, and simply because the statute directed the information to be brought by the attorney of the United States.

that in the act of Congress of February 28, 1891, declaring that "no license for the sale of liquor at any place within one mile of the Soldiers' Home property in the District of Columbia shall be granted, there is no penalty for a violation of it. But the Soldiers' Home law was additional to the authorities charged with the duty to weaken the democrats in the tion of the Soldiers' Home law shows an intention on the part of Congress to retain that law, and this is evident from the language of the twelfth section imposing a penalty upon any person engaging in the sale of intoxicating liquors in any portion of the District where the sale thereof is prohibited.

This provision could have no operation at all unless it related to the Soldiers' Home limit.

The repealing clause of the act of March 3, 1893, expressly retains the Soldiers' Home law; but suppose the act of 1893 repealed the Soldiers' Home law, that would not avail Dempsey. He still would be in the predicament of having sold liquor without a license. It was absolutely necessary for him in his defense in Sepate in February last as an associate to the second artillery is a peculiarly complicated one. sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of presented a letter from a property holder stating that he had no objection to the license, but refused to sign the same. This property holder's signature was absolutely necessary before the applicant could obtain a license, and the question arose whether this letter was sufficient under the law. The law, however, distinctly states that the applicant must have the written consent of the majority of the property holders and residents keeping house to his application before the same can be granted. Mr. Thomas, in his opinion, says today that he has carefully considered this matter, and is of opinion that such a letter from a property owner to the excise board is sufficient. The object of the law is to get the consent of persons within the prescribed limits of the place where the liquor business is to be conducted, and it is not very material in what form that consent is manifested. It may be by the signature of the property holder or resident to the formel application for license, or it may be in the shape of a letter addressed to the excise board. He thinks the letter is sufficient as evidencing consent, and it should be placed on the files in the case and the writer treated as though he had formally signed the application for a license. be placed on the files in the case and the writer treated as though he had formally signed the application for a license.

He says it will not only depreciate the value of property for many squares in that vicinity, but will also endanger the health and lives of every resident of the neighborhood, as well as the worthy poor of the Washington Asylum and the prisoners of the jail.

The acceptance of Lieut. Col. Sternberg of the position of surgeon general of the army will result in the promotion of Maj. John H. The question arose some time ago on the case of an applicant for a liquor license who presented a letter from a property holder stating that he had no objection to the license, but refused to sign the same. This with the question of the redemption of

MITCHELL PUMMELS JIM HALL.

London, May 31.—Sporting people are talk-ing about a severe fight, in carnest, between National Sporting Crib on Monday night.

It appears that Mitchell met Hall and quarreled last night near "Pony" Moore's resort, known as St. James' Hall.

The two pugitists tried to settle the quarrel with their fists, and Hall got decidedly the worst of the encounter. Hall was knocked down and had his head cut, and looked very
